Class Reflection

This class helped me understand how powerful interactive learning spaces can be for students. Before this course, I mostly thought about lessons as presentations or worksheets, but now I see how technology can turn learning into an experience. Creating an interactive lesson showed me how important design, visuals, and clear instructions are when trying to keep students engaged.

I learned that students learn better when they can explore, click, practice, and receive feedback instead of only listening to explanations. It also showed me that learning can be fun without losing its educational value.

This course inspired me to be more creative and intentional when planning lessons and to use digital tools to build spaces where students feel curious, motivated, and excited to learn.
